. . . those brave and honorable young men who left us to go forth on the field of battle never to return again. It was they who made it possible for us to carry on our normal lives here at school and to continue striving to uphold the ideals for which they died. We realize the importance of our school and every phase of our life here in maintaining the greatest gift these men have given to us—the blessing of peace.

Nineteen hundred and forty-six the year of your graduation from high school, has been heralded as the beginning of a new era. How different will this era be from the last? At the moment no one can say. There are some ways in which each and everyone of you can help it to be a vastly better period than the one which we have just been through. Are you going to fall into a rut of selfishness, or will you put all you have into learning about your neighbor and into helping him to meet his needs? Living "to get" has proved unworkable—Living "to give" must be your motto.

Be ambitious? Yes. Develop and use your talents?—Yes; but "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

The Faculty's Responsibility in the School

When the final chapters on the peace are written, education will truly be outstanding. During peace and war, education has stood strong and firm by all Americans. For without it, no country so great and so vast as this wonderful land of ours, could survive.

Let us look at this word education from a technical standpoint—we find it defined as the systematic training of the moral and intellectual faculties. Yet we find it hard to think of such an important factor in just that one term. It is only right to say that education is the thing around which our individual lives revolve.

Each great field has its leaders or those who guide, and education is no different. We have been fortunate in having so many wide-awake and intelligent people who are devoting their lives and learning to the teaching of others. For without these leaders where else would the children of America learn of peace and the world of tomorrow? Each teacher in his own small way has done much to forge the chain of thoughts that will tend to make the student of today the good citizen-parent of tomorrow.

To look at it this way, the road of Life now seems dark and weary from the chaos of war. However, as we grope along, we see a path—it is none other than the great highway of learning, from which shines a bright, golden light—the brightly beaming light as symbolizing the great struggle made by all teachers, in their fight for good, clear, and honest thinking.

It is only fitting to place the English department in first place, as it may well be called the fundamental basis of all studies. For, without an ample knowledge of the English language, it would be impossible for us to master any given subject. We would not be able to express or interpret our thoughts or for that matter, the thoughts of our neighbors. By reading the literature of far distant lands, we have made it possible to have closer contact with them. There is no better way to secure an understanding of a nation than by reading and absorbing her literature.

We also have courses in foreign languages offered to us. They have proven to be one of the most beneficial studies in connection with creating good relationships between countries. After all, what else is our document of peace based on than this—a good neighborly feeling between all the nations of the world?

On the other hand, through our study of the Social Sciences we not only study nations of the world, but we also find out all about the history of this great United States of America, its type of government and its functions. We are taught about the wonderful gift which each American possesses—the right to vote, the process of voting, and reasons for voting. We also satisfy our thirst to obtain more knowledge about our great fore-fathers. Then too, we learn of the hardships they endured creating for us a more perfect land. Behind it all there is the hope that we, the future leaders of tomorrow, may profit by their mistakes and obtain eternal peace, the goal which each nation of this world has struggled from time immemorial to attain.

Other important studies are the Science and Mathematics departments. In Chemistry and Physics, we are taught the mechanics of better living conditions and how to secure them for the great world of tomorrow. It is only right to say that without the advantages science offered us, we could not have had this wonderful peace so soon. Yes, the scientists helped to win the peace and we can be sure they will strive to enable us to keep it forever.

Mathematics—it has been proven—stimulates good, keen thinking. It teaches us the technique of figuring out a definite way by which to solve problems. This has proved invaluable in the art of warfare and will continue to do so in solving barriers that will confront the peace.

Now let us look at the departments of Art and Music, which have certainly broadened the outlook of the student. They have taught us to enjoy the finer things of life. They have provided courses in which the student has an opportunity to do creative work. Although we realize that we must not forget entirely the somber, less attractive things of the past war, we also know that in order to have a lasting peace we must appreciate the beauty of the works of art and music which the rest of the world has to offer.

Other equally important departments are those which include such courses as Shop, Home Economics, the Commercial Studies, and Distributive Education. These may well be grouped as a department of specialties because they fit the students "For all the walks of life." We have come to realize that it is the fellow in the store, the mechanic in the garage, the clerk in the office, the banker, the mother in the home that our peace will affect and they in turn, will affect the peace. So, naturally, people well-trained will be able to offer good suggestions and worth-while criticisms that will aid and not harm our peace.

In covering each department, we have stressed the great effect the faculty of our high school has had on the newly won peace. Let it not be overlooked that these teachers may well be added to the list of unsung heroes of the past war. These teachers can never be repaid in money or position, for their real payment comes when they see students go out into the world fully prepared and know that they have contributed to their education. Yes, through their undying efforts we will learn the full value of eternal peace and how to hold it.

SENIORS

Martha Sinnard ~ Natalie Farwell

"Seniors—The Citizens of Tomorrow"

The Senior Class of 1946 is the first peacetime graduating group at Washington-Lee in 4 years.

The greatest and most terrible war in the history of the world has ended!

America has lost many of her finest sons in the great struggle, many of them high school youths and high school graduates who had gone forth at the beckoning of their nation.

All high schools suffered losses of their students, and Washington-Lee joined the nation in contributing her sons to the common defense of her country.

These years are over! We may hope that never again will the youth and schools of the nation be called on to make such sacrifices.

It is up to the new generation to see that those who gave their lives and endured suffering may be rewarded, and that their families and loved ones will never face the trials and conditions which they underwent.

Those of us who are going on to college and higher education, as well as those who will enter the war-weary world as men and women, are the new generation. The seniors of today are the citizens of tomorrow! As citizens, we will enjoy many privileges and exercise many rights. We will select the future statesmen, leaders, and workers of tomorrow. We will shape policies and plans of nations; invent machines and devices for the comfort and advancement of scientific leisure; produce writers and intellectuals, and train doctors and dispensers of medicinal skill.

To make a brighter, more luminous world of tomorrow, we must be prepared to undertake these tasks. Our training and attitude toward the principles of peace and its advancement began in our school and met their greatest test in this, our senior year.

Seniors have been the leaders and pace setters of the high school. To them has been given much responsibility and on them has depended the future success of the school itself.

They have created pride and love for the school and set good examples which underclassmen may follow in years to come. By practicing these principles in daily life, we have prepared for our later lives as useful and democratic American citizens.

We have been trained in classes to be more useful citizens. We were encouraged by the courses in our curriculum to obtain a well-balanced knowledge of many fields of work and study.

Our future chemists, physicists, artists, writers, diplomats, and other workers all have gained a sample of their future work in seemingly unimportant, but vitally essential, high school classes, for careers are often born after sampling subjects concerning a field or profession.

The senior class of today, however, not only received invaluable training in studies in the curriculum, but also has had normal contacts with fellow students and actual participation in activities and events typical of those we shall meet in later life.

As seniors we have been able to participate in many decisions and to select many students as our leaders not only in politics, but also in society, scholastic honor, and other fields of merit. We have sometimes seen political machines of overly ambitious students and could at any time dictate favor to the individual student who worked, or ill-will to the student who neglected his duties.

Many social habits were learned, and good speech, good manners, and well grooming were encouraged and practiced. Here we have learned that honesty plays a major part in the development of young men and women, and diligence and truthfulness add their touch to the creation of the youth.

Fair play and the desire for something more than obscurity among fellow students developed, and the initiative which has played such a dominant part in our history and the spirit of competition, the basis and foundation of the American character, both became outstanding traits. Courage and aid to our fellow students, loyalty and strong bonds of friendship were born, and justice and generosity predominated. This is what has been instilled in and has begun to control the senior of today.

God in his wise vision and sacred movements has created in the American mind the will and strength to carry out his policies of justice and punishment!

The youth of America does not perish in famines, or die from blows of the tyrants, or suffer in want; he is allowed privileges and blessings unheard of in the most civilized of countries. How fortunate is he who has been granted these things!

What price must he pay for these benefits? What is asked of him? Shall he give money to charity organizations and then sit back in his smug, complacent manner and congratulate himself? Or must he give up all of his possessions and worldly goods and strive a lifetime to aid the poor? No, the answer does not lie in these extreme solutions. The correct method of fulfillment is to exhibit the traits of Americanism born on the dawning of manhood and womanhood—the senior year.

Charity, mercy, diligence, morals, faith in God, truth, cultural and social behavior are all asked of us as citizens of tomorrow.

A ravaged, war-torn world has but one country to which it can look for aid and guidance; a wretched, helpless world of sufferers must ask aid of a vigorous, prosperous nation of wealth.

Will we grant this aid? As tomorrow's citizens will we vote to grant a small share of our enormous bounty to these people? Or will we be persuaded by selfish, narrow demagogues to abandon these masses and to cease in the great attempt of the ages—for man to dwell side by side in peace?

The answer can lie only with youth; old, twisted minds will not quickly make such decisions. Youth must either go forward and demonstrate to the world its newly born traits of Americanism or join the ranks of past ages of those who had failed as America's young people.

We of the Senior Class of 1946 accept the challenge of preserving the peace so dearly won, so eagerly sought throughout the ages and we pledge ourselves to work in the democratic way to protect and insure the world of the blessings of this peace.

"History of the Classes of 1945, 1946"

The history of the class of '46 begins in 1943 when students from Thomas Jefferson and Claude Swanson Junior High Schools joined the ranks of those long familiar with Washington-Lee's long halls to produce the largest sophomore class in the history of the school. Miss Sally Loving, veteran counselor of many classes, was selected as its sponsor. About 520 crowded the thirteen home rooms alloted to them in the largest school many had ever seen. Their numbers were supplemented, as they would continue to be in years to come, by those from every section of the country, and a few from without. They came to the high school during the midst of the greatest conflict the world had ever experienced, and the effect of banner headlines, patriotic posters, and family anxieties permeated everyone's daily life. Early in September, a Civilian Defense parade was held and an exhibition staged at the school which found many of the class among the participants as cadets, messengers, and scouts. This spirit of patriotic cooperation continued to appear in many ways, particularly as War Stamp and Bond sales rose.

The class soon adjusted itself to the traffic system, time schedule, and other behavior patterns strange at first, but soon to become routine. The old cliques of friends were stirred up, but this only served to increase new friendships and acquaintances. They joined the sports and organizations of greatest personal interest and laid foundations which would prove to be influential to their entire lives. Many of those already outstanding in various fields implanted themselves firmly in those portions of the school life. Varsity football attracted many sophomore athletes, and the glee clubs and cadets gained many members. After heated elections, Walter Vass emerged as president of the class, with Bruce McKay (later a member of the merchant marine) as vice-president and Jeanne Payne carrying the secretary-treasurer's position.

As the year progressed, the students got down to the primary business of gaining an education; but diversions continued and who can forget the experiences of fellow "goats"? On March 3, the small auditorium was the scene of dancing and varied entertainments as the class held its first party, a great success from every standpoint. "Cats" and boogie contrasted with chess and fortune telling to satisfy every taste During the assembly on April 27, the one-act play "The Black Widow" was presented. One of the most successful plays ever produced by a school group, it was presented twice and proved to be a definite credit to the Sophomore class. By June, the class had become firmly established in every respect, and departed for the summer.

Late in September, the bells rang again and the Class of '46 returned to the familiar environment to greet old friends and new. The war still held everyone's attention, but the news was getting better all the time. A change had taken place in every person during the year, a change not to be regretted. They were up a grade not only scholastically, but in every field of endeavor in which they had participated. They were Juniors now, and with that red and tan ribbon came the distinction and privileges of being among the upper classmen. They made full use of that, too, and appeared in increasing numbers at the balls, dances, and among the various school organizations. Some of the most outstanding members of the Literary Society, the Hi-Y, and the Tri-Y were Juniors, and a Junior was selected "queen of hearts" at the Student Government's Valentine Party. On November 4, an "old clothes" party was held by the Juniors, which proved quite successful in acquainting the old and new members of the class with each other. Janie Rice, Andrew Barr, Jimmy Myatt, and Sallie Holland won prizes for the most original costumes. It is true that the class had decreased in size to about 360, due to the great turnover in the county's population, but this certainly meant no decrease in quality. The same class officers continued in office except the vice-president, whose position was filled by Jackie Taylor, and later by Oliver Overseth, as vice-president pro tem.

As the year progressed, activities increased. The home room with the highest percentage of perfect attendance each month was awarded a silver cup left by the class of '42. Bowling leagues were formed, and many departed in the afternoon for the familiar Clarendon alleys. A team dominated by Juniors was selected to compete on the Americana Quiz, a close contest which we lost by only one point. The annual Junior-Senior basketball game was not so successful from the Junior standpoint, but the underclassmen, primarily a Junior team, upset the Seniors in the best game on our court. The Junior girls were well represented too, when the Generalettes swept through their season undefeated to win the annual Star Tournament.

On April 19, the class presented the full-length melodrama, "Dangerous Ladies," by Hilda Manning, a play concerning a skillfully disguised ring of Nazi agents. Many in the Junior class had a part in preparing it, and it proved highly entertaining. On May 5, the Juniors prepared one of the finest flings held in the W-L ballroom, the Junior-Senior Prom, in honor of the departing class. Then came the time when the leaders for the final year had to be chosen. Walter Vass emerged from the elections as president of his class for the fourth consecutive year, and Jimmy Myatt appeared on the scene as vice-president. President of the Student Government turned out to be enterprising and popular Oliver Overseth, and Leslie Goldberg was elected editor of "Crossed Sabres." As co-editors of the Blue and Gray, Jimmy Myatt and Jeanne Payne were selected. It was with these leaders holding the reins that the class of '46 prepared to enter its final year.

In the fall of 1945, the class returned to school in a world virtually at peace. The last important phase of the great war had been won with atomic finality, and the enemies of mankind were sunk in the pit that they themselves had made. The first school year of peace brought a gradual return to the life which had previously characterized our country. Gone were the blackouts and air raid drills, the ration books and recaps, the newspaper columns and pictures edged in black. But gone also were those who had paid the supreme sacrifice, from president to private. The little brass plates in the library remained unfilled, as names ceased to be added to the list.

But in the class of '46, returning to their school for the final time, was present an emotion entirely divorced from national affairs, for this was their senior year, the culmination of twelve or more long years of science books and tardy bells, of oral reports and math exams. It also represented the time of their highest achievements and the rewards in recognition of those accomplishments. With the green and white ribbon, the gold ring, and that authoritative little Senior privilege card came a feeling of superiority only offset by a clearer knowledge of what lay ahead. Many of the class had moved away during the summer, but there were other new arrivals to help replace them. Since the secretary and treasurer of the class had departed, elections to fill these positions were held. Carol Grostephan emerged with the first, and on the fourth ballot, Solomon Danzig became treasurer. The usual class get together was held in the gym at an early date, and provided games and dancing to help the members become better acquainted. The class was out in strength at all of the social functions. The Fall Ball, the Spinster's Dance, the Alumni Dance (the first in many years and a very popular affair) as well as the various Cadet hops were scenes of frequent Senior revelry. The parties held by the various clubs and organizations (remember the crowning of the King and Queen of Hearts?) and of course the Junior Recreation Club—the place to go every Friday night that could always find something to give a special affair for—were all scenes of personal experience long remembered as were the auto rides and Hot Shoppes afterwards.

Sports too felt the effects of one of the best Senior classes in the history of the school. The football team carried an excellent record, culminating in its big game on Thanksgiving with a victory over George Washington, our traditional rival, by the biggest scoring in history to win the "Old Oaken Bucket." The memory of that game could only be overshadowed by that big bonfire rally the night before, led by the cheerleaders as the flames leaped forty feet into the damp air. Hockey, basketball, and baseball produced equally proud results, and the track meet in the Spring brought many more trophies to the school. The faculty and Junior-Senior basketball games, like the many others attended by the students, will also be long remembered.

Many of the assemblies, those welcomed interludes, became exhibitions of personal ability in other fields. Who can forget those produced by the Hi-Y, Elos, Kalagethos, the Annual, and many others? Remembered too, is that day in November when the school flocked en masse to the auditorium to see that big variety show. Nor can the Glee Clubs be forgotten, either from the early morning practice or the comfortable auditorium standpoint. The evening of December 7 saw the presentation of the fourteenth senior play. Fred Jackson's farce, "A Full House," provided amusing entertainment and some excellent exhibitions of acting and climaxed the dramatic achievements of the class.

Throughout the year, awards and scholarships were present in senior minds. At the very beginning of the year, Jimmy Myatt, Lenore Johnson, and Richard Funk took all the honors in a national motion picture contest, winning 1st, 2nd, and honorable mention respectively. The Literary Society led the way among our groups with their presentations of "oscars" to the best performers, their short story cup, and other awards. The D. A. R. and good citizenship awards also brought careful selection. In April, Washington-Lee entered many of the contests sponsored by the Virginia Literary and Athletic League, and returned with honors. There were also winners among those who took the examinations for scholarships given by Pepsi-Co'a and many schools of higher learning. Our own progressive class presented a penny scholarship, paid for out of the pockets of the lucky winner's fellow classmen.

By the time June had arrived, the class had realized that their high school days would soon be gone forever, but they continued to enjoy while they could their favorite studies and activities. They were on the receiving end of that slick dance thrown by the Juniors which had become such a tradition. They tried perhaps a little harder than usual on those final exams, and great was the relief when this last link with the cramming and midnight oil, long associated with Ye Olde Arlington School System, was broken. The green hats with their characteristic embellishments paraded promiscuously, and the three crowning events, the Senior Prom, Class Night, and the Commencement itself proved to be the highlights of the entire year. Graduation meant more than the completion of twelve years in an educational institution, for it proved to be the official entrance of every graduate into adult life and society. His "raison d'etre" was now clear as it had never been before, and beyond the cap and gown, the stirring words and music, lay a transition of utmost importance, from adolescence to maturity, which was now entering its final phase. Behind lay a multitude of pleasant memories of civics elections and early-morning meetings, of juke boxes and jalopies, of close order drill on icy streets, and the touchdown in the mud. The familiar sights, sounds, and odors of good old W-L would linger long.

We cannot omit the January graduating class in this history. Hampered only by lack of numbers, they nevertheless have enjoyed practically the same situations as the other graduation seniors.

As Juniors, their officers were Joan Felix, Hildegard Brussler, and Anne Bernham, president, vice-president, and secretary-treasurer respectively. As Seniors, Roy Comer, Hildegard Brussler, and Richard Canham were elected to fill these positions. Outstanding among their class activities was the Junior-Senior Prom, prepared on December 2, 1944, complete with orchestra; and the party held for them in '45. Their own prom occurred on January 18 and proved a gala affair. Their class day program was also enjoyed by many.

But no matter when they graduated, or in how many activities they participated, the individuals on the following pages have gleaned what they thought most important to their own general welfare from the school and the life therein. The future alone can speak for their success. It is a future no longer holding the beastly terror of war, but it also demands the best of their abilities and character to keep the world from again being degraded to such a position. In return for an education in so many fields, they have given to their school something invaluable which can never be forgotten. The class of '46 has many things to be proud of but also a challenge that must be lived up to if the world is to retain peace.

UNDERCLASSMEN

Position of Underclassmen

In a publication that is put out by the senior class, mainly for themselves, it is still impossible to forget the underclassmen. They are the seniors of the next year and of the next—therefore, as underclassmen they must prepare themselves for future responsibilities by taking an active part in school life.

When the new student enters W-L, he finds himself in a place which may be strange and unfamiliar. Few students retain this impression for long; as time goes by, they find themselves making a place for themselves, finding new friends, and entering into new activities.

For school is more than a place to go each day during the hours of nine-thirty to four. It is the first enlarging of the world—the first glimpse of a more free life. The confidence born of capably taking each problem as it comes is the most useful gift which you can carry with you into the world, and the basis of this is founded in your years as an underclassman.

Primarily we go to school to learn, not only to study in order to pass, but also to learn. Almost everyone has felt the thrill that comes from the reaching out of the mind to grasp something new, whether it is fixing an old car, baking a pie, or discovering the atomic secret. It is a universal force, the power we feel when we have mastered the secret of a thing and know we hold it forever. This faculty then is the one to exercise. It cannot be stressed too much. It will make a great difference when you are ready to graduate. Although this advice is too late for seniors, you may still profit from it, while you have a measure of time before you.

The world that you will face when you graduate is not an easy one, nor has it ever been. Now you live in the haven of school life, and for one more year or two you will continue to live in its comparative shelter. Therefore, does it not seem logical that these words of teachers and parents should often fall on unlistening ears? Even if some have not heeded, you must make it your duty to practice this advice.

It may be useless to tell you to make the most of school at this time, but now it is not too late and later it would be. For many are the seniors that wish they could have heard and heeded! When it means the difference between gaining or losing a job or admission to a college you want to attend, it is important.

There are other aspects of your life to be looked into. It is the aim and the hope of every class to surpass those that went before. This hope can be attained only through the cooperation of a class united to give its best to make itself the most outstanding.

In our school we have a student government system. The president of the student government and the other officers are elected by the students themselves. It is up to them to put into office the students most capable of doing the job and doing it well. It is up to the students to put into office those who can best secure the cooperation of students and teachers. But that is not all that rests with the students. It is up to them in whatever they do. It is impossible to achieve anything if the president tries in vain to rouse the students, and they are too indifferent to listen. The object of this system is not to shift the responsibility from your shoulders to any one student's, but to organize things into better working order. Your job doesn't end with putting him in office; in reality, it takes up from there. Get behind your officers and help them to do a good job!

While going to W-L, it is probable that you have realized that there were many activities that the school has to offer. If you have not come in contact with them yet, you will eventually become aware of them. The cadets drilling during fifth period, the varsity team practicing on the athletic field, the publication of the school newspaper—these things will begin to point to the conclusion that school is not restricted to textbooks.

Every underclassman should make an effort to enter into at least one outside activity. The activities are so varied that almost anyone can find one to suit his individual taste or talent. Going through school day after day or applying yourself to the utmost in your studies and learning is not the whole story. Activities play their part, too, but take care that the studies do not become subordinate to them.

Participating in some phase of the school outside of the routine classwork gains students experience in fields of interest, and gives them a well-rounded personality. To work hard at something—writing for the newspaper, winning a football game, putting on a school play—promotes school spirit and helps to identify the individual with what really constitutes "W-L." It gives you a place in things, a definite job to do, a feeling of really belonging. We urge every underclassman, therefore, to join some activity and really put his heart into working for the school.

In every class there are leaders. These people appear time and time again when a problem arises to clear the way to straight thinking. They are the ones who head committees, who become class presidents, whose names are set forth with a long list of services after them. To them belong much glory and much admiration. It is right and fitting that the students with above average talent and personality, who have used this in the right direction for good, should receive honor. That cannot be disputed. But don't withdraw from something because you feel that the leader gets too much glory. When the Glee Club sings, no one stops to pick out the president; when the football team plays, no one stops to pick out the captain; it is all the voices and all the team which plays, and though a spectacular run, or a lovely solo deserves credit, the fact remains that without the other players, without the other voices, it would be as nothing.

Remember that each of you has a place in your class, and that all of you working and pulling together can bring your class way out in front. The best of luck to you!

Junior Class History

September 1944 What a place! W-L is huge compared to Swanson or T. J. We have fourteen 10A Homerooms! There are so many kids here that they have to have one-way traffic in the halls. It is very confusing to say the least!

October 1944 Class Elections! Bob Shirer is President; Pat Merritt, Secretary-Treasurer. It seems Bob was President of the ninth grade class here last year.

January 1945 We gave our first real assembly this morning! It was an amateur show. I enjoyed it a great deal—especially when the Boys' Glee Club shot Carl Holley. How anybody could be so stiff!!!

February 1945 What a game! What a game! I would say that the Junior-Sophomore Basketball Game was certainly a success—for the Sophomores!!! It was a double-header, for boys and girls, and we won both.

March 1945 An important event—our Sophomore Class Party. It was held in the "W-L Ballroom" (otherwise known as the Girls' Gym). I think every girl in the Sophomore Class was there and about half of the boys!!! I had a good time, though. We danced some, but most of the time we played games, ate, and watched a floor show.

May 1945 We elected our officers for next year. Bob Shirer is still our President. I wonder if he will run for a fourth term? Dickie Meinberg was elected Vice-President, and Billie Joe Hickman, Secretary-Treasurer.

June 1945 Boy is it hot! I'll be so glad when school lets out. This weather is awful!

September 1945 Not that I haven't had a good time this summer, but it was good to get back to school. Being an upperclassman is o.k. What a time we did have getting our class colors! The O.P.A. or somebody put an order through banning the manufacture of beige ribbon.

November 1945 The flu bug seems to have hit W-L the same time as the Junior Party. This year the party is at night—wouldn't you know I'd have to miss it!!!

December 1945 I had my picture taken for the Annual today. I just know it's going to be terrible!

March 1946 Tonight the Junior Play was given. It was really very good. I think it was enjoyed by everyone. At least I enjoyed it!!

May 1946 Election time again! This school is a changed place. The halls are covered with posters and the kids are covered with campaign buttons!!!

May 1946 If I don't get a bid to the Junior-Senior Prom, I'll just curl up and die. This suspense is killing me.

May 1946 I did. (Get a bid, not curl up and die!!) The Prom was heaven. The decorations were beautiful, the music good, and the crowd large.

June 1946 School let out today. It was kinda sad to see the Seniors go—they're a pretty good class, after all. But just think—next year we'll be Seniors!!!

Sophomore Class History

If the Sophomore Class published its own annual, what an interesting record it would make! Let us visualize such an annual for a minute. As we open it, we see informal snapshots of Sophomore pupils around school participating in all fields of school activity. On the next page, we find Mrs. Campbell, the 10B sponsor, followed by the pictures and personals of her group. Their smiles seem to indicate that they are remembering the picnics and parties they have had together.

Then there is the distracted but undaunted Miss Hickerson with her 10A students. These students came from Thomas Jefferson and Claude Swanson Junior High Schools, or were already in attendance at Washington-Lee; but there are some who are much farther from their former schools, and one even came all the way from Holland.

Now come the superlatives. Our sophomores have many students who are outstanding in scholastic ability, wit, athletic ability, and popularity—and what a job it would be to choose from among them the "most likely to succeed."

Pictures of the play cast adorn the next page. Those who attended Washington-Lee in their freshman year remember the precedent set with their production of Dickens' "Christmas Carol," which was applauded by all who saw it. This play, which would have done credit to much more experienced actors, set a tradition of professional entertainment which the sophomores resolved to continue throughout their high school years.

The sophomores are well represented in cadets, as well as the student government and patrols. As another example of sophomore initiative, it would be well to mention the clean-up campaign—many a sophomore can be seen burrowing in the bushes while his geometry awaits him.

Of course, the class has not neglected other school activities. You can see them represented in the Glee Club, Newspaper Club, and all the other groups that they are eligible to join. There is always interest in the athletic teams—or the team members—and many can reminisce about the rivalry between the junior high school teams. Now, however, these former rivals are united to defeat W-L's foes.

But even such a record could not include all the memorable occasions this class has enjoyed. Successful parties and dances have become another tradition since the pattern was set in the ninth grade, where we enjoyed food, music, and entertainment. Nor could it show the enthusiasm that prevails. It has been said many times, but it is worth repeating again, that spirit is the all-important thing in any group whether it is a club, class, or school. A group that not only is interested in good times, but also will pitch into other tasks and fulfill other obligations, will find that its pleasures will follow naturally, and the spirit of this class is a promise that it will live up to all expectations.

ACTIVITIES

Activities—Testing Ground of Future Careers

A school of today is more than an institution of learning. We not only spend many hours of our lives at Washington-Lee in study and school work, but also are engaged in school activities for many hours.

Activities of many types serve as testing grounds for future careers and create the well-balanced student of tomorrow.

We are indeed fortunate in having a Student Government Association in our high school. This gives students a wonderful chance to try to become leaders. For, as each of us knows, the student leaders of today may well be the leaders of tomorrow. The patrol system we have in our school shows each of us the importance of following rules and promotes cooperation among all groups, in striving for our common goal—a better school. For, after all, isn't that what each of us is working for—a school which may be acclaimed the best? Probably no better examples could be used for showing the theme of working together than the Annual Staff and Newspaper Staff. We have a newspaper of which we can be exceptionally proud. It has proved itself invaluable as a perfect record of school events from year to year, not to mention the enjoyment it gives its many readers. Our Annual, when placed among those from the many other high schools, has always made honorable showing. We must mention that, although the publication of this annual requires many hours of hard work, the students who participate are duly repaid. Yes, it can be stated that the experience gained from their untiring efforts proves itself invaluable in later life. The writings along the editorial line are excellent training for the students. The field of Journalism contributed much to the winning of the peace, and we can feel confident that this generation will produce many fine journalists.

Let us now turn to the Literary Society, which offers to the students an outlet for their literary talents. It gives one the honor of excelling in a field so great as the literary field.

Let us not overlook the importance religion has played in the winning of the peace. The students of W-L have an excellent chance to participate in clubs of this type. It gives them an excellent opportunity to find out the important role religion plays in our everyday school lives. The purpose of these clubs is "To create, maintain, and extend throughout the school and community high standards of Christian character." They are affiliated with the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A., and the members have the privilege of using the facilities of these clubs.

To give career-minded students a proving ground, the school provides a club along this line. It is intended for those who wish to enrich their high school study and experience by gainful employment. Through their eagerness to learn by doing, these students were employed in jobs that really helped during the man-power shortage. The club program highlights business and its opportunities, as well as community problems and the part the student may play in helping to solve them. As a national, state and local organization, this club has as its chief purpose the development of leadership in the students studying Retail Training.

Music and singing are cultural arts, and so they appeal to the finer senses and during times of stress prove to be very uplifting. Many war-weary minds were comforted and soothed by the peaceful atmosphere created by this singing. The recitals given by our Glee Club, in the various communities of the county, were gratefully received and complimented by all who attended. We cannot leave this subject without mentioning the effort put forth by those participating in the program. It not only trained them but also gave them an opportunity to take part in an effort to raise the morale of the community during such trying times.

Thus, we get some small glimpse of the great part Activities have played in building the lives of the student body as a whole, while our loved ones waged a great war for our protection. Without them, we could not have achieved the many things we now have in our school; without them, we could not as ably face the world of today and of tomorrow, confident that we are fitted to accept and pass along the great heritage of peace.

Activities at Washington-Lee

BLUE AND GRAY

The Blue and Gray is the Senior Class's annual publication worked hard on all year and issued the last few days of the school year. There are four staffs of the Blue and Gray:

The Art and Photographic Staffs take the pictures and illustrate the annual.

The Editorial Staff writes up the personals and other literary work of the annual.

The Advertising Staff goes to many people and business firms to secure ads to help pay for the annual.

The Circulation Staff, which is the largest, goes from homeroom to homeroom taking orders to buy the annuals.

These staffs are under the direction of the editors, who are responsible for the final layout of the annual, and the sponsors who are ready to assist at any time.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

The Student Government of Washington-Lee is an association which strives to carry out the desires of the student body through a council and forum duly elected by the students. The council is composed of the class presidents of the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth grades, and the June Senior Class Vice-President. The forum is made up of the homeroom presidents from the tenth through the twelfth grades.

The main project of the Student Government this year was to aid in the cleaning up of the school grounds and other parts of the school buildings.

The Student Government has sponsored many successful dances during the year. The Fall Ball, being the first of the season, brought many lovely formals out of mothballs. The alumni dance brought many of the old grads back to see the present students and to enjoy a preholiday get-together. The Spinsters Ball in the spring was a grand chance for the girls to ask their favorite date.

The success of the Student Government has been what it is because of the close coordination and cooperation of the student body.

CROSSED SABRES

The school newspaper, Crossed Sabres, is published every two weeks of the school session. It gives the students of Washington-Lee an opportunity to learn what other students of the school are doing and also what is going on in the different activities of the school.

There are articles of general news on athletics, student government, society, fun, literary work, and all other student and school activities.

ELOS

Elos, the Washington-Lee chapter of the Virginia Literary Society, was organized in 1939 by Miss Lee McNeil and Mr. Lewter. At the present Mr. Campbell sponsors the club in an effort to permit the literary students to develop their talents.

The society has well-planned programs once a week. Highlights of the year have been the annual debate, the Elos assemblies where guest speakers were presented, the Elos play, the "Oscars" for the best actor and actress of a school play and one for the best school play. A trophy for the best short story written by a student was given. For the first time this year a trophy was given to a boy and to a girl who showed scholastic ability and athletic ability to the best advantage.

GIRL RESERVES

The Girl Reserves are junior members of the Young Women's Christian Association. Membership in the club is open to all of the 7th, 8th, 9th, and 10th grade girls who accept the purpose, "To find and give the best."

Club life for Girl Reserves offers a variety of worthwhile activities, from educational talks to many social activities.

HI-Y

The Washington-Lee Hi-Y Club completes its twelfth year as one of the most prominent service organizations of the school. It co-operates with other school activities and heads many of its own. The Hi-Y conducts many social activities and community activities fulfilling its purpose, "To create, maintain, and extend throughout the school and community high standards of Christian character."

TRI-Y

Tri-Y has completed its third successful year, following its purpose, "To create, maintain, and extend throughout the school and community high standards of Christian character."

The Tri-Y is a junior organization of the Y.W.C.A., and the members participate in "Y" activities and also sponsor many of their own activities.

In carrying out their many community activities they collect food and clothing for the poor and also make things for children in hospitals. In the school this year they took as their main project handling the Red Cross drive.

SERVICE CLUB

The Service Club is an organization of able boys who help in such things as preparing the stage for assemblies and school plays, running the projection machine and doing many useful tasks for the benefit of the school.

LIBRARY CLUB

The Library Club is made up of students who help the librarians with the functioning of the library. They check out books, repair books, put them back on the shelves when they are returned, and write out time on library permits.

In addition to this the club has activities of its own. They have parties and they also serve at various teas which are usually held in the library.

DISTRIBUTIVE EDUCATION

The Distributive Education Club, under the leadership of Miss Gwathmey and Mrs. Alexander, has just completed its third successful year. The club is for students who wish to enrich their high school study and at the same time gain experience from employment.

The club has had many well-known business men and other persons to come to speak to them. Among visitors to our campus were such famous persons as Elizabeth Arden and photographers from Life Magazine. As a National, State, and Local organization, the Distributive Club has as its chief purpose the development of leadership in the students studying Retail Training.

JUNIOR GLEE CLUBS

The Junior Glee Clubs, under the direction of Miss Cromer and Mrs. Payne, offer to the members of the Junior High School an opportunity to show their voice ability and also help them prepare for the Senior Glee Clubs.

The Junior Glee Clubs have sung at church service, P.T.A. meetings and also at certain assemblies. In the spring they sang at the Junior High promotion exercises.

ORCHESTRA

The orchestra, under the direction of Miss Sumrall, offers an opportunity for students playing musical instruments to show their talents and ability and to enjoy both classical and popular music.

The orchestra meets as a class each day and learns things such as harmony and how to blend tones to produce pleasing music. It has played at school assemblies and other gatherings and its work is well appreciated by the students.

GLEE CLUBS

The five glee clubs of Washington-Lee meet under the direction of Miss Florence Booker. The Mixed Glee Club is a choir of 85 boys and girls who meet at 8:30 two mornings each week; the Madrigal Singers are composed of 12 boys and girls who sing unconducted and they meet at 8:30 three mornings each week; the Girls' Sextette is made up of 6 girls who sing unconducted, meeting at 4:00 two afternoons each week; the Boys' Glee Club meets second period daily and the Girls' Glee Club meets sixth period daily.

Among the many activities of the Glee Clubs were the Christmas Candlelight Concert held in December, featuring the Singing Christmas Tree; the Christmas Recital at Y.W.C.A. in Washington; the District Music Festival held at Front Royal in March; the State Music Festival held in Richmond in April; the Annual Spring Recital held in April. The Glee Clubs have also appeared in numerous assemblies, at service, women's and community clubs, Arlington County Teachers' Association, P.T.A. meetings and commencement exercises in February and in June. The Madrigal Singers climaxed their year with a recital at The Arts Club in Washington in May. The final activity of the year was a Mother's Day Tea honoring all the glee club Mothers.

KALAGETHOS

Kalagethos, the W-L Chapter of the National Honor Society, was established in 1937. The name means striving for beauty, nobility of character and leadership. Membership in the society represents the highest honor obtainable in the school because it recognizes all phases of school life. Eligibility in Kalagethos depends on character, scholarship, leadership, and service. The aim of the society is to stimulate a desire in students to excel in these four cardinal principles.

Kalagethos is a service organization and has been functioning in that capacity this year by furthering the projects of former years and taking over new ones. One of the most outstanding and helpful to all is operating the milk line in the cafeteria. They also plan to continue the orientation program in the Junior High Schools in the late spring.

Athletics—An Essential of the Future

A new era of athletics will soon be upon us! Not only are we beginning to realize the definite value of sports to high school students, but we are realizing the existence of new types of sports and new methods of teaching them.

In past years the athletic training of all our youths has often been neglected, but the recent war has clearly shown us the need for a compulsory program of athletic training in high schools.

It is true that American athletes and teams are, generally speaking, the best that the world knows. Our swimmers, football and baseball stars, trackmen, and tennis immortals have long issued challenges that foreign nations accept and seldom surpass.

These athletes have faced opponents of all races and colors and have conducted themselves at all times in a sportsman-like manner. They have proudly carried the American banner from this land to many shores and by their courteous, competitive zeal have long been favorites among foreign peoples.

When the war-weary world can again turn its head toward international sports competition, the friendly, determined American teams will be warmly welcomed once more.

However, the small number of citizens participating in essential, body-building sports in this nation is astounding! Of course, we can not all be sent abroad to represent America as sports stars, nor can we even play on large teams in this country, but we can develop an interest in certain sports and in our spare time participate in them. A game of golf, badminton, table tennis, tennis, or a swim regularly, whether in an indoor or outdoor pool, can do wonders for the health of the youth.

Regular exercises and calisthenics will also benefit the body and prepare it for its later years of slowed activity.

In the present world and in the coming world of tomorrow, when so much of all of us is and will be expected, we must be not only intellectually prepared to meet the tests but also physically prepared as well.

The creative genius of man is moving faster and progressing at a speedier rate with each passing day, and the body and mind must do likewise. Actually the healthy body is the key to a healthy mind. When we feel strong and vibrant and healthy, we do our best work.

Those who devote many hours to study and use of the brain often find an overwhelming tendency to depend too often on the mind, and by their neglect of their body, find it useless and unmanageable. Often bad health results, and then the mind does not function properly; and, thus, because of the lack of proper training and frequent use of the body instead of the mind, both are rendered useless.

Along with body exercises and training we are beginning to instruct students in the proper and correct use of the body. This is a subject which has long been neglected in homes as well as in schools. In order that America's future generations might be stronger, healthier, and wider awake, health courses are now beginning, and will continue to be, essentials. Not only will this phase of athletics be an aid to society, but also it will solve many problems of the youth himself.

Millions of Americans have enjoyed not only participating in athletics but also watching and admiring them as well. It is expected that in the new era millions more will be added to the ranks of onlookers. Nothing so clearly exhibits the American love of fair play and competition as these sports games, and they have provided recreation and enjoyment that we all patronize. Citizens of tomorrow, therefore, can see the advantages of participating in and appreciating the athletic field which so vitally affects their futures.

Let us not neglect our bodies but let them aid our minds to advance toward the principles of peace, prosperity, and a vigorous, more healthy American people.

The Record for 1945-1946

Amid the cheers and songs led by the cheerleaders, Washington-Lee's first team to meet recognition was the football squad. Under the able coaching of "Pop" Deming and Mr. Kavalier, Washington-Lee scored 184 points against the opposition's 80, won six games, lost two, and tied one.

This year the squad was headed by Jake Garland and Floyd Bice as co-captains, with Bice calling some twenty-five touchdown plays. Dickie Lewis led the Little Generals in touchdowns and Aubrey Holsinger pulled down top running honors. Although this year's team was mostly Junior material, next year's team will still feel the shock of the absence of players like Ted Leech, Roy Comer, Floyd Bice, and Jake Garland. It was the last four boys along with four of their teammates who made W-L the best represented high school in the All Star Game.

At the same time a squad of 21 girls, W-L's Hockey Team, was making a grand showing. Co-captains Kay Clees and Jackie Brodie, along with excellent cooperation of the team, succeeded in carrying W-L through a season of four wins, one tie, and one loss.

The first game of this season was with the girls of Fairfax. The "Generalettes" romped through for a three to zero victory. Friends School, however, managed to hand the girls their one and only defeat. Then our team clashed to a one-one deadlock with Fairfax. Staging their comeback, the team completely whipped Bethesda-Chevy Chase by a score of 6-0. Montgomery Blair fell to defeat as our team broke through their line for a score of four to one. Once more, in the final game of the season, Bethesda-Chevy Chase lost to our over-powering team. High scorer for the 1945 season was Kay Clees.

As the fall season ended, the boys' Basketball Team began with a roar, pulling down straight wins in its first games to cop the Suburban Athletic Conference Tournament; then, not satisfied, the team went on to give even a better show. Coach Rockwell had promised "a good year" and with high scorers George Binsted and Perry Currin as co-captains backed by Garber, Reinhart, Chalfant and Lambers, Washington-Lee turned out one of its best ball teams.

However, the boys were not the only ones with a good basketball team. The girls really made an excellent showing in their eleven games. The Girls' Basketball Team first came into their own in the winter of 1943. Although the girls had plenty of ambition it was the first year of importance and the lack of material made the number of games won low in average.

This year's season turned out 16 members on the squad; ten of whom were members of last year's undefeated session. Sporting Kay Clees, Ruth Miller and Louise Garber as forwards and Dottie Reymer, Jinxie Ingle, and Dolly Hellman to back them up as guards, W-L could not fail.

The track team was the next to head the sports bill as eleven lettermen returned. With Duffin running the mile; Leech, Shack and Danzig holding down the dashes; Reymer and Garber rating tops in the pole vault and high jump ;and the weights being tossed by Bradley and Herrington, W-L was a sure success.

While the track team was showing the Greeks and Romans how it should have been done, another one of Washington-Lee's great sports got under way as Baseball brought back Jake Garland, "Andy" Anderson, Bob Ambrogi, Nelson Harvey, Bill Hayes and a great team.

Thus we completed another season in Washington-Lee Sports. Football, Basketball, Track, and Baseball, Players, Cheerleaders, and Spectators—all taking part in teamwork and sportsmanship—Washington-Lee's contribution to Sports!!

CADETS

The Value of High School Cadets

It is Founder's Day. The sun is pouring down on the athletic field—on the stands with hundreds of students and on the American flag flying high. Out on the field the leader of the band raises his baton and the band begins a military march—the hearts of both the interested and the disinterested spectators lift in the strange way that they always do when a band plays and an American flag is flying. The cadets start drilling. Beads of sweat stand out on their foreheads. The boys go through the King's Manual, the girls go through the Queen's Manual —the crowd applauds. The new appointments are read; a surge of excitement runs through the crowd. As the new officers pass, you can see the smiles on their faces. Overhead in a wide blue sky the sun still beats down.

This is the Cadet corps. Perhaps to those on the outside it is difficult to understand the excitement that goes with events like this. But it is not so strange.

In the heart of almost any human there lies a seed of what we call patriotism. As the heart and mind grow, this seed gradually blooms into the conscious recognitio ı of allegiance to an intimate unity called Country. One form of patriotism is the desire to serve the country by putting on a uniform and marching. The difference between this desire and the desire to war—to kill— is a wide, wide difference. It involves none of the fearful emotions that produce war and bloodshed. It is merely a conscious desire to serve in an easily recognized manner.

That is the basis of cadets. It takes those who wish to join and teaches them how to obey, how to lead, how to think—useful talents—as a matter of fact, so useful that we cannot get along without them.

From the first rather strict drills grow the closeness, the comradeship that you find among the members of the corps. They learn how to cooperate, how to work together to make the whole unit acceptable.

Have you ever watched the Crack Squad drill? You are not aware at all of the different people going through the separate motions; you are conscious only of the effect the whole squad produces by its miraculous cooperation. That is the impression they want to give, that of all being one, moving as one.

The Cadet corps teaches cooperation. Now, as the obscuring shadow of war is gone, and we can clearly see the chaos that it has left behind, one overwhelming fact reaches us: if we are to survive, our hope lies only in the cooperation of every person on this earth. These boys and girls in the cadets are learning this, now, and it means less grief when they are older.

Every high school boy and girl should be taught how to obey orders! One of the easiest ways to learn is in the Cadet corps. Later in life the foundation obtained in these years will be invaluable; for nowhere in life are there positions in which at some time or another, you must not know how to obey the orders of others, without making a mistake.

To be able to give orders is also an invaluable asset. All the difference in the world lies between a shoddily given command which is not obeyed, and an authoritative command which is obeyed instantly and to the letter.

The services that the cadets do for the school are recognized by everyone. When we think of them, we think of many scenes: the flag being raised and lowered, the Crack Squad drilling, a company marching down 13th street. They are one integral part of the school. Day after day, winter and summer they march. In winter their faces are red and pinched with cold, in summer flushed and sweating; but there is a thrill in the discipline of drilling day after day that could not be captured in a warm room reading a magazine. To many students the first of spring is announced on the day that the cadet band can be heard through the open window, and on succeeding days work becomes almost intolerable to students sitting by the window and watching the cadets marching along the street.

It cannot be expressed in words what the cadet feels, as he marches in his company and glancing up, catches sight of the flag, but it is a proud, fine emotion. And every day you see them march, remember they are doing their part for the world.

The Washington-Lee Cadet Corps was formed in 1928 and was one of the first of its kind in this area. It has been going strong ever since, and now is one of the finest in the country.

Most of this year's senior girls and boys joined cadets in the 10th grade. Bill Keiter was regimental commander and Alice Jones was the auxiliary major. The band was under George Douglass. Of course, a few of our present senior boys have been cadets for more than three years.

Some things we remember from that year are: Company I had a party and later the picnic down at Lubber Run Park. . . . Company K's Captain Rosalie Smith broke her leg while riding horseback—later won prize company ribbon. . . . Company L's still-remembered party was held at Captain Cathie Burger's house where Anne Abbott did the Queen's Manual with a broom and Pepi-Cola bottle. . . . The boys' crack squad was under Captain Dick Ford and the girls' under Barbara (Sally) Hilbun and Barbara Corror. . . . The Regimental Ball was made a success with Lynn Allison's singing. . . . Taylor Rooks' Company B won prize company drill. . . . The new order of having Founders Day and Commissions and Warrants Day was begun. (Up 'til then it had all taken place on one day and had lasted for hours, with speeches, presentations, drills, etc.)

When we returned in the fall we had a new P.M.S. & T. (Professor of Military Science and Tactics to you civilians) and also a new girls' battalion sponsor. Major John W. Stanley took the place of Captain Harrison Beavers, who had passed on that summer, and Miss Frances Keck took the place of Miss Sadie Williams (for whom that famous club is named) who had left to get married.

We won't forget that year's officers who were: Lee Bonney, Regimental Commander; Anne Abbott, Girls' Battalion Commander; Carl Ring, Band Major.

In that year, we became non-coms and subsequently members of the Chevrons Clubs. Our big event was the Chevrons Club Dance, for which we had the Magazine Drive in order to collect money. Every morning over the loud speaker system came an announcement of something to the time of "Meet Me In St. Louis" and ending with "Oh, no, we want only magazines." (Ah, yes, there's bad news this morning!) It got results, though, and we made a profit of about 60 dollars. The four girls doing the singing were B. J. Hale, Audrey Roland, Betty Jones, and Helen Yost.

Some of the things that can be remembered from that second year are: The girls' battalion picnic at Lubber Run Park. . . . Crack squads . . . the boys under Captains Dick Burrington and "Skippy" Fox . . . the girls (otherwise known as "Lee's Lost Battalion") under Lieutenants Connie Cardwell and Jodie Call. . . . Company L's party where Joyce Templeton had Major Stanley jitterbugging and where he also went through the paddle-wheel. . . . The concert the band gave in early March. . . . Crack Squad's exhibition drills held at Swanson and Thomas Jefferson. . . . The Regimental Ball with Lynn Allison for the second time (we hear some of the boys escorted her home that night). . . . Anne Abbott and Roy Comer. . . . Formation of a Rifle Club. . . . Prize companies . . . Company A under "Skippy" Fox and Company L under Mary Alice (Pat) Yager. . . . Our two prize companies drilled at George Washington . . . "Skippy's" company won for the boys, but the G. W. girls won; (get "Skippy" to tell you about that newspaper write-up). . . . Junior weeks. . . . Sam Browne Dance. . . . The girls' Battalion going to Glen Echo Park. . . . Founders Day, and Commissions and Warrants Day, which wound up a big year. The last gathering for the girls was the party given by the old officers for the new ones at Anne Abbott's house.

This year, when we returned to school, we were seniors and most of us officers!! Bernard (Skippy) Fox was in command of the regiment, Betty Jane Hale of the girls' battalion and Jack Lyon of the band. Our officer's organizations, the Sam Browne Club and the Sadie Williams Club, were formed. At the same time the non-commissioned officers organized the Chevrons Club.

The crack squads were picked and began drilling under Captain Bill Stamper, and Lieutenants Virginia Giles and Barbara Kendall (Every morning at 8:15, the Crack Squad showed up at a quarter of nine—a saying of last year's Crack Squad which is usually pretty accurate.) During this year the squads participated in the variety show, assemblies, and drills at Thomas Jefferson and Claude Swanson Junior High Schools.

The band, as usual, played at most of the football games and drilled at the big G. W. game. They also took a trip to Woodberry Forest and played for that game. They developed some new tunes which made a hit with the fans, namely, the slide trombone and the "trumpet yell."

The girls started off the year with a picnic at Lubber Run. They all marched down, ate, played games, sang, etc. It will probably become a tradition to do so in future years. Company I had a party at Nance Number's house (featuring hard cider), Company K had one at Betty Jones' and Company L had one at Marietta McCabe's. Sorry we can't say more about the boys, but it's the girls who go in for this social stuff. However, both boys and girls participated in the Regimental, Chevrons, and Sam Browne dances which always take planning and hard work in decorating. But no year would be complete without our usual military dances.

As winter turned to spring our thoughts turned to the annual drill with George Washington High School, rifle matches, and the Winchester Apple Blossom Festival, from which war time emergencies in transportation had so long kept us. Excitement mounted as to which company would be prize company to represent us at Alexandria. The usual rumors flouished concerning next year's officers but it wasn't until after the time-honored Founder's Day that we published the ratings and revealed the choices.

Today's Prayer

Kind Father, help us banish hate from lands
Whose people long knew death and direst need:
Replace despair upon the ravished sands
With living proof of Christ's enlightened creed.
Help us, the youth of earth, to gather strength
Of body, mind and pray'rful spirit free
That we may priceless wisdom gain at length
To right the wrongs that we can daily see.

There is no time to spare for vain delay;
The work is waiting now for each to do.
We must accept the challenge of the day;
So help us, Lord of All, to see it through.
For freedom's flag must someday be unfurled,
A symbol of true peace throughout the world.

Dear Lord above, how long must man woo peace?
What truce will snare her restless soul today?
Must terror, grief, and bloodshed never cease,
And hunger, want, privation hold full sway?
Atomic power shocks the thought of man
And eyes of radar see through darkest night;
Still greed and strife beset our earthly span
And fears crowd out our faith in truth and right.

The world's brave men have given up their all
At leader's beck, to stem the tide of sin.
Oh, living youth, come quickly at the call,
Serve willingly—let faith keep peace within;
For victory is but a hollow shell,
If righteousness and love cast not their spell.

—EDNA JOY IVIE.
